The Band in the Square on the Fourth of July is based on a late nineteenth century patriotic song titled “There Are Many Flags in Many Lands,” which seems to have first appeared in The Child’s Song Book for Schools and Home Circles by Mary H. Howliston, published in 1888. The song and lyrics have been sung and recited for many generations on Flag Day, Veterans Day, and Memorial Day:

There are many flags in many lands,
There are flags of every hue;
But there is no flag however grand,
Like our own Red, White and Blue.

This instrumental setting is a “patrol” and is intended to be a slice of turn of the twentieth century Americana.

A small town Fourth of July parade with bunting, banners, flags and the school or town band approaching from the distance, becoming louder and louder until, at the loudest point, the band is directly in front of you. (You are standing on the curb on the same side as the bass drum and cymbals which, for a few seconds, overwhelm and drown out everything else around you.) Then the band passes by with the clarinets and flutes trailing behind, and all eventually fading away.

The challenge for young bands will be to start as softly as manageable and end in the same manner. The entire piece is a gradual crescendo, sustained forte, and a more rapid, yet controlled, diminuendo.

If possible, avoid playing cues, although the tuba may feel free to play the cued low woodwind notes up until the sustained note at the end.

There are two snare drum parts on separate pages to accommodate the skill of the player(s). The two parts may be played together.

The scenario in these program notes is based in part on one of the composer’s earliest recollections of a parade in Cedarburg, Wisconsin.
